Sebastian Conran is continuing to expand his Universal Expert line of modern and functional goods that help aid our daily lives with organization, practicality, and style. Last year we explored their cooking and storage items and now they're back with a collection that aims to organize your home office. The range covers just about everything you could possibly need and comes in durable materials, like leather and cork, so they'll last for years.

Universal Experts home office collection launched at January 2015's Home show in London.
